At Cerence, we are always looking for opportunities to shine a spotlight on the countless stories from across our global teams. Recently, we had a chance to sit down with someone who is constantly working to bridge the gap between our product team and customers. One of our Senior Sales Engineers, Ramy Morsy, who works out of our Detroit-area office.

What's your favorite thing about working at Cerence?

I love the teams I work with – they are so helpful and friendly. It's also such an innovative company that's building the waves of the future and it is great to be part of that.

What's kept you at Cerence?

My favorite part has been our Cerence Technology Conference in Ulm where I got to meet all my coworkers and colleagues from across the globe – some of whom I may never see again so it's nice to get to meet people that I work with and present to and deal with on a daily basis.

In what ways do you feel encouraged to grow in your career at Cerence?

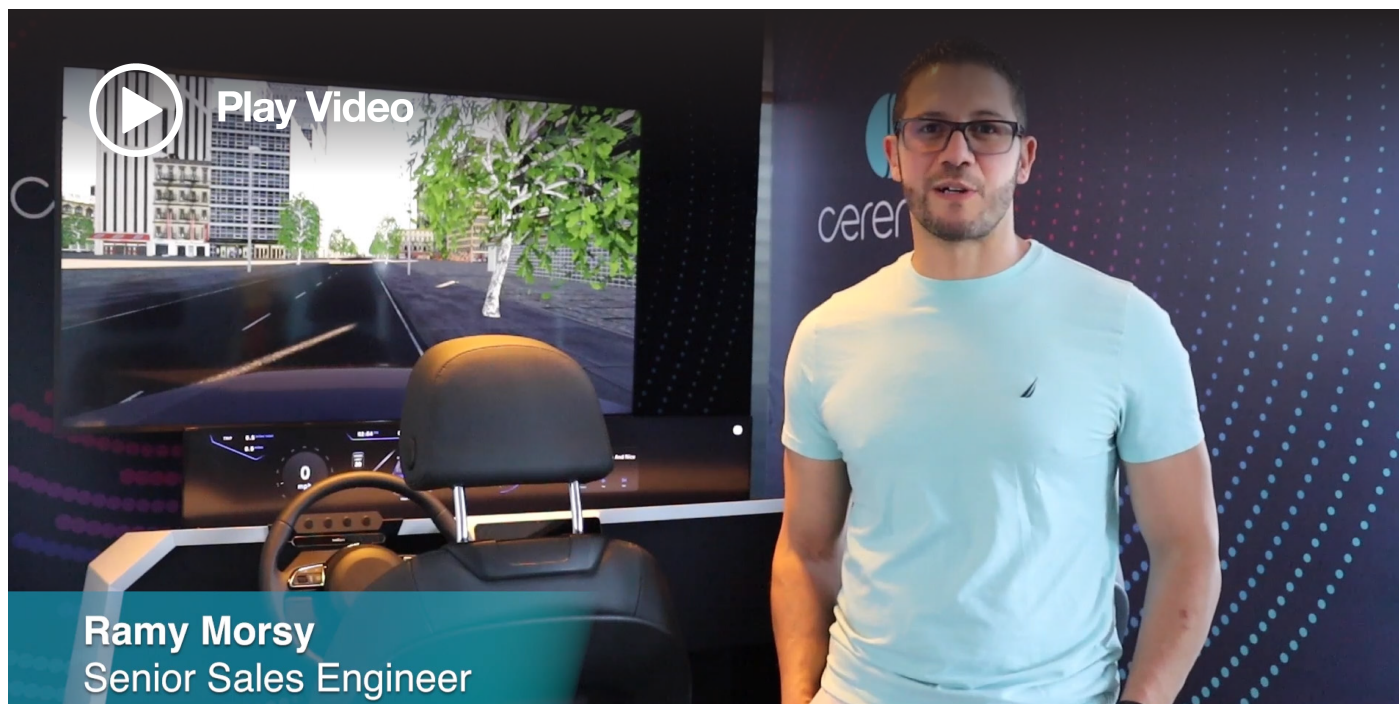

I have a great team and want to become a stronger member and participant in it. I'm so intrigued by AI and AR and I want to become much better at it.

What are you most looking forward to in the future at Cerence?

I want to see Cerence become the world leader in AI in mobility. I want to help contribute to that., personally I want to grow alongside the company.

What do you like to do when you're not working?

I love to bake and cook. I rock climb and even salsa dance!
