Purpose

Cerence Inc. ("Cerence" or the "Company") has adopted this Policy as one element of the steps it takes to ensure that Cerence personnel do not violate, or create the impression of violating, laws that prohibit buying and selling securities while in possession of material, non-public information about the issuer, and also prohibit tipping (providing material, non-public information to others who then buy or sell securities).

During the course of your employment with Cerence or one of its direct or indirect subsidiaries you may receive important information that is not yet publicly available about Cerence or other publicly-traded companies with which Cerence has business dealings. Because of your access to this information, you may be in a position to profit financially by buying or selling or in some other way dealing in Cerence stock or stock of another publicly traded company. Or you may be in a position to benefit financially or otherwise by passing this information on to some other person. This document sets forth Cerence's policies regarding (1) not engaging in insider trading, (2) adhering to trading black-out periods and (3) prohibiting short sales and derivatives trading.

Audience

This Policy applies to all Cerence personnel worldwide and to the Cerence Board of Directors.

Policy

Insider Trading and Tipping Are Prohibited At All Times

It is a violation of U.S. Federal and State securities laws and of this Policy for any of us to buy or sell a company's securities at a time when we possess "material, non-public information" relating to the company. This conduct is known as "insider trading." Passing such material, non-public information on to someone to buy or sell securities - which is known as "tipping" -- is also illegal. These prohibitions apply to stock, stock options or any other securities of Cerence, as well as to securities of other companies if you get access to material, non-public information about such other companies in the course of your duties at Cerence.

"Material, non-public information" is information about a company that is not known to the general public and is likely to influence a typical investor's decision to buy, sell or hold the company's securities. Material, non-public information can include information that something is likely to happen -- or even that it just might happen. The following types of information are particularly sensitive and, as a general rule, should be considered material:

- operating or financial results;
- major new product or service offerings;
- significant business or technology acquisitions, dispositions or joint ventures;
- the award or cancellation of significant contracts or technology licenses;
- important pricing changes;
- major management changes;
- debt or equity transactions;
- plans for substantial capital investment;
- significant write-offs or increases in reserves;
- significant litigation or disputes;
- delays in product development or problems with quality control;
- a stock split or other recapitalization;
- a redemption or purchase by Cerence of its securities; and
- any other information which is likely to have a significant impact on Cerence's financial results or stock price.

If you possess any of the foregoing types of information, the law and this Policy require that you refrain from buying or selling Company securities until after the information has been disclosed to the public and absorbed by the market. In most cases, we assume that the market will fully absorb information after one full day of trading after the information has been made public, and that trading may resume/commence on the second trading day after the information has been made public.

Insider trading and tipping are prohibited even if we are not in a blackout period. The fact that you have material, non-public information is enough to bar you from trading. It is no excuse that your reasons for trading were not based on that information. For example, you might have planned to sell Company shares at a particular time to pay a tuition bill. You may not do so, however, if you are aware of material, non-public information about the Company at that time even though the sale was planned earlier.

In addition to being a violation of this Policy, persons violating these "insider trading" laws maybe found guilty of criminal activity and receive substantial fines (up to $5,000,000) and a jail sentence (up to twenty years). The United States Securities & Exchange Commission may also file a civil lawsuit seeking to recover up to three times the profit gained, or loss avoided, from insider trading activities. In addition, shareholders and Cerence may sue for damages. Finally, Cerence could receive substantial fines for insider trading by its employees.

No Trading During "Blackout" Periods

In order to protect you and Cerence from allegations of insider trading, this Policy prohibits the following people, who routinely have access to material non-public information about quarterly financial results, from trading during "blackout" periods:

- Members of the Board of Directors;
- Officers (Vice Presidents and above);
- Executive assistants to officers (Vice Presidents and above);
- Members of the following departments/teams regardless of employee level:
 - Legal Department;
 - Finance and Accounting Department; and
 - Corporate Communications.

"Blackout" periods for these individuals--and for any other Company personnel who gain access to financial results before they have been made public--begin one week before the end of each fiscal quarter and end after one full day of trading has occurred after the public release of the quarter's earnings, i.e., the window will open on the second trading day after the information has been made public.

Approximately one week prior to the beginning of each blackout period, covered personnel will receive an email reminding them of the dates the blackout period will be in effect. At that time, if you have any limit orders outstanding, you should suspend them for the duration of the blackout period. Otherwise, your broker might execute a trade for you, which is prohibited by the blackout period policy. The Company reserves the right to block trading in equity-plan linked brokerage accounts of covered personnel to help avoid inadvertent violations of this Policy. In addition, if the Company incurs any expense to reverse a trade that is executed during a blackout period by an individual that is prohibited from trading at that time, the Company shall have the right to be reimbursed by such individual for the total amount of the expense incurred by the Company.

In addition, there can be special blackout periods for people involved in particular matters before such matters are made public. Persons subject to a special blackout period will be informed by the Company.

Sole Exception to Prohibition Against Trading When in Possession of Material, Non-Public Information or During a Blackout Period

Acquiring shares from Cerence, whether through settlement of a Restricted Stock Unit, cash exercise of an Option or through an employee stock purchase plan is permitted at any time. Note, however, that even though you may acquire shares from Cerence while in possession of material non-public information or during a blackout period, you may only sell the shares acquired during open trading windows and when you do not possess material, non-public information about Cerence.

Executive Officers, Members of the Board of Directors, and their Affiliates are Encouraged to Trade Through 10b5-1 Sales Plans

The Company recommends that officers, Members of the Board of Directors effect transactions in Cerence securities through Rule 10b5-1 sales plans. Company's Rule 10b5-1 Plan Guidelines are available on request.

No Short Sales or Trading in Options and Derivatives

U.S. Federal law prohibits officers and members of the Board of Directors from selling short Company stock. Because short sales represent a bet that the Company's stock price will decline, this Policy prohibits all employees from shorting Company stock.

This Policy also prohibits all employees and directors from engaging in any transaction in publicly traded options on Company stock, since such speculation can harm the Company by sending inappropriate or potentially misleading signals to the market. This prohibition applies to all types of publicly traded options and derivatives (other than employee stock options granted by the Company).

Company policy also prohibits all employees and directors from purchasing Cerence stock on margin. This means borrowing money from a brokerage firm, bank or other entity in order to buy Cerence stock.

Preclearance of Trades

From time to time, the Company may find it necessary to require persons, such as employees, consultants and contractors, to pre-clear transactions in Cerence securities. If a person is notified that he/she is subject to the Company's preclearance procedures, the person must refrain from trading in Company securities, even during the trading window, without first complying with the Company's "preclearance" process. Each affected person should contact the Company's General Counsel prior to commencing any trade in the Company's securities. All trades must be pre-cleared in writing.

Individual Responsibility

Every officer, director and employee has the individual responsibility to comply with this Policy against insider trading. A person may, from time to time, have to forego a proposed transaction in the Company's securities even if he or she planned to make the transaction before learning of the material non-public information and even though the person believes he or she may suffer an economic loss or forego anticipated profit by waiting. The same restrictions apply to your family members and others living in your household. Employees are responsible for the compliance of their immediate family and personal household.

Additional Information - Executive Officers and Members of the Board of Directors

Executive Officers and Members of the Board of Directors of the Company must also comply with the reporting obligations and limitations on short-swing transactions set forth in Section 16 of the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, as amended. The practical effect of these provisions is that officers and directors who purchase and sell the Company's securities within a six-month period must disgorge all profits to the Company whether or not they had knowledge of any material non-public information. Under these provisions, and so long as certain other criteria are met, neither the receipt of an option or other equity award under the Company's plans, nor the exercise of that option or vesting of an award nor the receipt of stock under the Company's employee stock purchase plan, is deemed a purchase under Section 16; however, the sale of any such shares is a sale under Section 16.

Handling Inside Information

Previously undisclosed information about Cerence's financial and business development, condition or performance is considered confidential inside information. Employees should not discuss or disclose confidential inside information with any person outside the Company, such as the media, investors or stock analysts. Any inquires about these subjects should be referred to the Chief Financial Officer or General Counsel.

Post-Termination Transactions

If you are aware of material non-public information when you terminate employment or services, you may not trade in Cerence's securities until that information has become public or is no longer material. In all other respects, the procedures set forth in this policy will cease to apply to your transactions in Cerence securities upon the expiration of any "blackout period" that is applicable to your transactions at the time of your termination of employment or services; provided, however, Cerence may waive this requirement if there has been an extended "blackout period," (ii) options you hold will expire prior to the termination of the "blackout period" and (iii) you certify that you are not aware of any material non-public information.

Definitions

- Insider Trading - Is buying or selling publicly traded stock, or tipping others to buy or sell publicly traded stock, while in possession of material, non-public information.
- Tipping - Is passing material, non-public information about a publicly traded company to someone else who may then buy or sell securities based on that information.
- Material, non-public information - information about a company that is not known to the general public and would be reasonably expected to influence a typical investor's decision to buy, sell or hold the company's securities. Material, non-public information can include information about future events even if it is uncertain whether those events will occur.
- Blackout Periods - Are periods of time when Cerence, in accordance with this Policy, prohibits trading in Cerence stock by the people subject to the blackout period. There are regular quarterly blackout periods for executives and certain other people. There can also be special blackout periods for people involved in particular matters before such matters are made public. You will be notified if you are subject to a special blackout period.
